REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

The above-named member of the Department appeared before me on November 18, 2025. Respondent, through his counsel, entered a plea of Not Guilty to the subject charges. The Civilian Complaint Review Board (“CCRB”) did not call any witnesses, but offered the hearsay statements of the complainants, “N.B.” and “N.T.P.¹”, in each case and body worn camera (“BWC”) footage from each incident. Respondent testified on his own behalf. A stenographic transcript of the trial record has been prepared and is available for the Police Commissioner’s review. Having evaluated all of the evidence in this matter, I find as follows:

Disciplinary Case No. C-030812

Specification 1: Issuance of Retaliatory Summons - Guilty

Disciplinary Case No. C-030938

Specification 1: Discourtesy – Not Guilty

Specification 2: Threat of Arrest – Not Guilty

Specification 3: Use of Force - Guilty

Specification 4: Discourtesy - Guilty

Disciplinary Case No. C-030812

The following is a summary of the facts which are undisputed. This case arises from an incident that occurred on March 7, 2023, at approximately 11:46 P.M. The complainant, N.B., parked his car in a crosswalk and exited his vehicle to purchase food at a nearby restaurant. Officers Raymond Perez and Christian Anasa pulled up next to N.B.’s vehicle and requested his identification. N.B. provided identification and began recording the encounter on his cell phone. At around this time, Respondent and his partner, Officer Roman, arrived on scene. N.B. questioned the officers' reasoning for taking law enforcement action. Officers instructed N.B. to keep his hands visible and informed him that his vehicle was parked in the crosswalk and had illegally tinted windows. After conducting checks in Department databases, the officers admonished N.B. for parking his vehicle in the crosswalk and instructed him to get the tints fixed, but they did not issue him a summons. (CCRB Ex. 3 at 01:40-06:00)

The officers began walking away from N.B., but as Officers Anasa and Perez entered their police vehicle, N.B. requested the name and shield number of Officer Roman. Officer Roman then approached N.B., and the two exchanged words. Officer Roman told N.B., in sum and substance, that they could still take the car, tow the car or write him a ticket. As N.B. and Officer Roman talked, Respondent asked Officer Anasa and Perez for a summons. Respondent told Officer Roman to "hold up" as he wrote a summons for N.B. (CCRB Ex. 3 at 06:12-09:44) Officer Roman then stated to N.B., "Now we are going to do part two. You want to play games? Let's play games. We'll see who wins." (CCRB Ex. 4 at 06:48-06:53) Respondent issued N.B. a summons for parking in the crosswalk.

Respondent testified that on the above-mentioned date, he and his partner, Officer Roman, responded to the scene to back up Officer Anansa and Perez who had a car stopped. Upon arrival, Respondent observed the vehicle in question, parked in the crosswalk "blocking pedestrians from walking by." He further observed the officers conversing with N.B. Respondent got the impression from the verbal exchange that N.B. was "giving the officers a hard time." He reasoned that N.B. was "aggressive and just going back and forth questioning every reason as to why he was stopped." (Tr. 25-26)

According to Respondent, the encounter concluded with Officers Perez and Anasa using their discretion to let N.B. go without issuing him a summons. Just as they were leaving, N.B. requested Officer Roman's name and shield. Respondent then asked Officers Perez and Anasa for a parking summons. When asked why he decided to issue the parking ticket after the other officers had decided not to issue one, Respondent stated:

I believe that after giving him multiple chances in using all the discretion we had, the defendant still managed to get a piece of paper, crumble it and throw it on the ground right in front of us, which would be littering. At that point is when I decided to enforce the original stop for the traffic summons. (Tr. 28)

Respondent asserted that his decision to issue N.B. a summons had nothing to do with the fact that N.B. requested his partner's name and shield number.

CCRB offered the hearsay statement of N.B. in evidence which was admitted by stipulation (CCRB Ex. 1A-B and 2A-B). During his interview, N.B. testified that on the night in question, he was "on the clock" doing a pickup. He pulled up to the corner of 3778 Broadway to stop at a Chinese restaurant. As he exited the restaurant, he noticed "two detectives" at a red light who immediately pulled up in front of his vehicle, "cutting it off." N.B. explained that although he parked on the corner, he was not double-parked and was not near a fire hydrant. N.B. did not address the fact that he was parked in a crosswalk. He testified that he was never told the reason for the stop throughout his entire interaction with the officers. (CCRB Ex. 1B at 4-5, 12, 15, 17, 19)

N.B. explained that he was questioned by the officers and provided identifying information as requested. Soon after the questioning began, several additional officers arrived, which prompted him to pull out his phone to record the interaction. N.B. testified that the officers "were pretty aggressive" and hassled him about recording. He described Officer Roman, who arrived with Respondent, as more aggressive than the others and testified that he never directly engaged with Respondent. (CCRB Ex. 1B at 5-6, 31, 35)

N.B. described the entire interaction as lasting “well over five minutes.” Once the officers verified his information, they issued a warning to fix his tinted windows and walked away without issuing a summons. He interpreted that to mean the officers “were letting [him] go.” As they walked back to their vehicles, N.B. recalled asking for Officer Roman’s badge number. Officer Roman initially pointed to it from a distance, but then he —along with Respondent— walked closer and stated, in sum and substance, “now you’re detained again.” N.B. testified that Officer Roman continued to engage with him while Respondent wrote the ticket. (CCRB Ex. 1B at 7, 38-41, 43)

The issue before the Tribunal is whether Respondent issuing a summons to N.B. constituted a law enforcement action involving abuse of discretion or authority. Having considered the testimony, evidence and arguments put forth by the parties, I find that although Respondent had a sufficient legal basis to issue the summons, he did so for improper motives and therefore abused his authority as a member of service (“MOS”). It is clear from the BWC footage that Respondent issued the ticket in retaliation for N.B. exercising his right to question the law enforcement action being taken against him and requesting Officer Roman’s name and shield number.

In his testimony, Respondent claimed that the reason he pursued the summons was because, even after N.B. was given “multiple chances,” he observed N.B. crumple a piece of paper and throw it on the ground. Respondent insinuated that N.B. littering is what caused him to exercise his discretion to issue summons. The record, however, does not support Respondent’s self-serving version of events.

CCRB Exhibit 4 shows that after Officers Anasa and Perez concluded their interaction with N.B., Respondent and his partner also walked away. It was not until N.B. asked for Officer Roman's "badge number" that Respondent immediately approached the other officers' vehicle and asked for a summons. The timing of the summons issuance under these circumstances is suspect. Moreover, there is no evidence to support Respondent's claim that N.B. littered during the interaction.² Respondent also did not issue N.B. a summons for littering, only the parking infraction. These actions suggest to this Tribunal that Respondent used the summons to retaliate against N.B., rather than as a tool to remedy a traffic infraction.

Accordingly, I find Respondent Guilty of Specification 1.

Disciplinary Case No. C-030938

The second case stems from an incident that occurred in the evening hours of February 23, 2023. On the night in question, Respondent approached a male on the street, "M.D.,"³ who was drinking alcohol out of an open container. Respondent and his partner exited their police vehicle to issue M.D. a summons. M.D. fled on foot, so Respondent pursued him. As M.D. was running, Respondent observed M.D. discard packaged drugs from his person. Shortly thereafter, M.D. was apprehended. At the time of M.D.'s arrest, a male voice can be heard on BWC video yelling, "Get the fuck out of here!" (CCRB Ex. 6 at 01:00)

After M.D. was handcuffed, Respondent turned his attention to another male, N.T.P., who was standing a short distance away, watching the arrest of M.D. and verbally expressing his concern about the arrest. Respondent ordered N.T.P. to move to the sidewalk. When N.T.P. did not immediately comply, Respondent threatened to arrest him. According to Respondent, he then proceeded to place his hands on N.T.P.'s shoulder and "guided" him onto the sidewalk. (Tr. 53) N.T.P., who was obviously angry, began yelling and cursing at Respondent as he was walking away. Respondent replied to N.T.P. by shouting, "Shut up, man. You ain't nobody!" (CCRB Ex. 6 at 02:16-02:40)

² It is worth noting that what was captured on Respondent's BWC was Respondent littering (he threw a snack wrapper out the window) just before arriving on scene. (CCRB Ex. 4 at 00:10)

Regarding the above-mentioned incident, Respondent recognized that his interaction with N.T.P. was not cordial. Respondent explained that when N.T.P. did not comply with his initial request to move to the sidewalk, he "put [his] hands on his shoulder and got him to the sidewalk." He further elaborated that he did not grab N.T.P. strongly or shove him and that N.T.P. did not fall or complain of injury during this brief encounter. Respondent did, however, admit on cross-examination, that he "pushed" N.T.P. onto the sidewalk. (Tr. 33-34, 51)

Respondent also acknowledged that he made the above-mentioned comment to N.T.P. but claimed he was not trying to be rude when he made that statement and was responding to N.T.P.'s remark, "you don't know who I am." Respondent reasoned that he "just wanted to continue [his] investigation and recover the drugs without dealing with that third party." According to Respondent, the statement he made was necessary to complete his duties because he was attempting to clear the scene and search for the drugs. (Tr. 35-36, 57)

During cross-examination, Respondent conceded that at the time of M.D.'s apprehension, N.T.P. was about a car length away and that he was not physically intervening in M.D.'s arrest. Respondent also agreed that N.T.P. did not threaten him, but he was being non-compliant with his directives to move on to the sidewalk. (Tr. 49-50)

N.T.P. was interviewed by CCRB on March 1, 2023. An audio recording and transcript of the interview were received in evidence as CCRB Exhibits 5 & 5A, respectively. N.T.P. testified that on February 23, 2023, at around 9:07 p.m., he was standing outside his workplace, taking a smoke break. While on break, he noticed a male individual being chased by two individuals he later learned were police officers. He explained that he followed behind to see what was happening. He observed the officers pushing the assailant to the ground, causing him to stop running. After the pursuit, while the assailant was being apprehended, N.T.P. recalled that he stood approximately two to three car lengths away observing, when he realized he recognized the assailant as someone who frequented his workplace. That prompted him to shout repeatedly to the officers, “don’t hurt him.” (CCRB Ex. 5 at 7-10, 15, 17-18, 20, 27, 32, 34)

N.T.P. testified that he continued to watch the encounter to make sure the male in police custody was not harmed, eventually stepping into the street to get a closer look. He stated that as he continued shouting at the officers not to hurt the assailant, they mostly ignored him except for Respondent. Respondent told N.T.P., “Get on the sidewalk, or I’m putting you in cuffs,” repeating it as N.T.P. attempted to explain the reason for his presence. (CCRB Ex. 5 at 107)

N.T.P. explained that after a brief disagreement between the two, he turned his back to get on the sidewalk and Respondent “shoved” him. N.T.P. provided further detail about the encounter and stated that Respondent pushed his right shoulder with one hand, causing him to “almost fall on [his] face.” (CCRB Ex. 5A at p. 10-11, 24-25, 37, 49-53, 56)

N.T.P. acknowledged that he cursed at Respondent, and the two engaged in a “back-and-forth” yelling match. He described feeling “irate” and “frustrated,” and stated that he asked for Respondent’s badge number. He recalled that Respondent shouted, “cool, I don’t give a fuck,” from the other side of the street before yelling out his badge number. Then, upon request for verification, Respondent walked over and physically showed N.T.P. his badge. He explained that once the unpleasant exchange ended, he returned to his workplace and later filed a CCRB complaint. (Id. at 11, 13, 46-47, 53-56)

Specification 1: Discourtesy toward M.D.

The Tribunal finds that CCRB did not prove, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that Respondent was discourteous to M.D. The only evidence presented by CCRB at trial to support this charge was Respondent's BWC. CCRB Ex. 6 shows Respondent chasing and apprehending M.D. The first minute of the BWC, as is customary, does not have accompanying audio. At the one-minute mark, Respondent and another male MOS can be seen taking M.D. into custody and a male voice can be heard yelling, "Get the fuck out of here."

While the words uttered constitute profane language, this Tribunal could not tell who made that statement or the context in which it was made based upon the evidence presented by CCRB. It was clear that Respondent and the other MOS were engaged in law enforcement action, but there was no testimony or evidence provided to this Tribunal about what, if anything, preceded or occasioned that statement. Moreover, at trial, Respondent could not positively identify his voice as the person that made the statement. Additionally, M.D. did not testify at trial, so he could not provide context or confirm that it was Respondent that made said statement.

In the absence of sufficient evidence to corroborate the charge, this Tribunal cannot make a finding of the alleged misconduct. Accordingly, this Tribunal finds Respondent Not Guilty of Specification 1.

Specification 2: Threat of Arrest

Specification 2 charges Respondent with threatening to arrest N.T.P without sufficient legal authority. I find that CCRB has failed to prove this charge by a preponderance of the credible evidence. I therefore find Respondent Not Guilty.

After M.D. was apprehended, Respondent turned his attention to N.T.P., who was standing a few feet away watching the encounter. Respondent directed him to move to the sidewalk, so that he could secure the scene and canvas for the drugs. N.T.P. did not immediately comply with Respondent's order. Respondent then asked him if he wanted to be "put in cuffs."

Respondent was attempting to continue his investigation while simultaneously addressing N.T.P.'s noncompliance with his request to move onto the sidewalk. Respondent warned N.T.P that if he did not comply, he would take legal action. Indeed, on the continuum of tactics that members of service should employ to address a civilian's passive resistance, issuing a verbal warning, is not only lawful and prudent, but a preferred alternative. Respondent's statement was a measured response to the situation and could have obviated the need for more intrusive measures to gain N.T.P.'s compliance.

This Tribunal finds that Respondent's statement did not constitute the wrongful threat of arrest. Accordingly, I find him Not Guilty of Specification 2.

Specification 3: Use of Force

This Tribunal finds that CCRB has met its burden of proof in demonstrating that Respondent's action of pushing N.T.P. was wrongful and without police necessity. Respondent admitted, and the BWC footage corroborates, that he placed one hand on N.T.P.'s shoulder and pushed him back toward the sidewalk. The only remaining question is whether this use of force was excessive under the circumstances. Patrol Guide Section 221-01 defines excessive force as “greater than that which a reasonable officer, in the same situation, would use under the circumstances that existed and were known to the MOS at the time the force was used.” In determining whether a use of force is reasonable. Patrol Guide 221-01 further instructs members of the service to consider the severity of the crime, the immediacy of the perceived threat and the age, size and condition of the subject.

Here, the reasonableness factors, common to use of force inquiries, do not justify Respondent’s actions. N.T.P. was not the suspect of a crime, but merely a civilian who was observing a police encounter involving someone he knew. There were also no credible safety concerns raised by Respondent. In fact, there was no action by N.T.P., immediately preceding Respondent’s push, which could objectively justify his use of force. Moreover, Respondent testified that N.T.P. did not pose an imminent threat to him and did not attempt to interfere with the arrest of M.D.

The video evidence does show that N.T.P. did not immediately comply with Respondent’s directive to get on the sidewalk. However, N.T.P. did tell Respondent that he would move to the sidewalk but to “give [him] a second.” (CCRB Ex. 6 at 2:19) N.T.P. remains standing in the same position for a few seconds longer, when Respondent states, “Go on the sidewalk or I’m going to put you in cuffs.” (Id. at 2:22) Respondent then advances closer to N.T.P. and once he gets within arm’s length of him, he places his hand on N.T.P.’s shoulder and pushes him toward the sidewalk (Id. at 2:27) At the moment the push is deployed, N.T.P. does not appear to be engaging in any activity that would justify any use of force.

While the force employed was slight and did not cause injury, the video evidence depicts a use of force that, while minor, is sufficiently gratuitous and unconnected to a legitimate law enforcement purpose to qualify as excessive force. In fact, it appears that the push only escalated the interaction. Prior to the push, N.T.P. exhibited a calm demeanor, but after Respondent pushed him, his tone and affect changed. N.T.P. became noticeably angry, leading to a verbal dispute between the two.

Accordingly, the Tribunal finds that the preponderance of the credible evidence establishes that Respondent's push of N.T.P. was unreasonable and excessive under the circumstances. I, therefore, find Respondent Guilty of Specification 3.

Specification 4: Discourtesy toward N.T.P.

Respondent is charged with discourtesy related to a comment he made to N.T.P. at the tail end of their interaction. Specifically, Respondent stated, "Shut up, man, you ain't nobody!" I find that CCRB has met their burden of proof by a preponderance of the relevant, credible evidence that Respondent was discourteous to N.T.P.

Any analysis of whether the language used by a respondent is discourteous must consider the context in which it is used. Among the factors to be considered are whether the allegedly discourteous language includes swear words, or words that, under the circumstances presented, can objectively be seen as discourteous; whether the words spoken are disrespectful because of the time and place of their utterance; and the relationship of the parties to the conversation.

In this case, Respondent admitted that he made the alleged comment but claimed that he did so in response to N.T.P.'s remark: "you don't know who I am." Respondent reasoned that he "just wanted to continue [his] investigation and recover the drugs without dealing with that third party." According to Respondent, the statement he made was necessary to complete his duties because he was attempting to clear the scene and search for the drugs discarded by M.D. (Tr. 35-36, 57)

It appears from Respondent's explanation, that he was frustrated that he had to "deal" with N.T.P. and wanted to go about his job without the inconvenience of a vociferous civilian. This Tribunal finds that Respondent's remark was objectively discourteous and demeaning and advanced no legitimate police purpose. His language was unprofessional within the context of this type of law enforcement action. Instead of de-escalating the encounter, Respondent added fuel to the fire with his words.

Thus, I find Respondent Guilty of Specification 4.

PENALTY

In order to determine an appropriate penalty, this Tribunal, guided by the Department's Disciplinary System Penalty Guidelines, considered all relevant facts and circumstances, including potential aggravating and mitigating factors established in the record. Respondent's employment history was also examined. See 38 RCNY § 15-07. Information from his personnel record that was considered in making this penalty recommendation is contained in an attached memorandum.

Respondent, who was appointed to the Department on January 6, 2016, has been found guilty of issuing a retaliatory summons in the first case (C-030812) and excessive use of force and discourtesy in the second case (C-030938). CCRB requested the presumptive penalty for each specification to be imposed, and that they run consecutively. According to the Disciplinary Guidelines, the presumptive penalty for Use of Non-Deadly Force resulting in No Injury is 10 penalty days, for Discourtesy it is 5 days and for Enforcement Action involving Abuse of Discretion or Authority it is 20 penalty days.

Regarding the wrongful use of non-deadly force and discourtesy, this Tribunal is inclined to recommend the presumptive penalty. However, as it relates to the charge of the issuance of a retaliatory summons, this Tribunal does not believe that the presumptive penalty is appropriate under these circumstances. Pursuant to the Disciplinary Guidelines, the category of Enforcement Action involving Abuse of Discretion or Authority encompasses a wide variety of enforcement actions ranging from issuing a summons to arrest. In this case, Respondent has been found guilty of issuing a retaliatory summons, which is, objectively, on the lower end of the spectrum. Moreover, there is no evidence in the record that this law enforcement action had a substantial impact on the complainant. Therefore, this Tribunal opines that the mitigated penalty of 10 penalty days is a more appropriate disposition.

These cases illustrate the challenges inherent in enforcing relatively minor, quality-of-life ordinances with proportional responses to recalcitrant citizens. This task often requires a balancing of the societal benefits of compelling strict adherence to certain norms of behavior against the need for the public to see the professionalism and integrity of the members of this Department as a non-negotiable core value.

In the first case (C-030812), Respondent allowed his judgment to be clouded by a civilian's vociferous disapproval. The encounter that was initiated by other members of service had already concluded and was only rehashed when the complainant voiced his dissatisfaction with the Respondent's partner's actions. Citizens have the right to question law enforcement actions and even express their disapproval without the risk of retaliation. Although Respondent never actually spoke with the complainant, he unnecessarily escalated the encounter by issuing him the parking ticket. Based upon all the attendant circumstances, Respondent's issuance of the summons appears to have been retaliatory.

In the second case (C-030938), Respondent exceeded his authority in the way he attempted to compel N.T.P. to follow his lawful directives. In attempting to seek N.T.P.'s capitulation to his authority, he created the circumstances for a disproportionate response to a minor transgression. Moreover, Respondent's conduct reflected poorly on the public image of this Department without a commensurate return on the maintenance of public order.

Based upon the foregoing, I find that a penalty of ten (10) vacation days to run concurrently-- five (5) days for discourtesy, ten (10) days for use of non-deadly force and ten (10) days for the retaliatory summons-- is a sufficient sanction for Respondent to deter future, similar misconduct.
